Child Marriage

CHILD marriage is a bane in many African and Asian countries. Worldwide steps are being taken by governments and non-governmental organisations (NGOs) to prevent this malady. The World Bank and the International Center for Research for Women has come out with a specific study on Ethiopia, where child marriage is prevalent. The study reveals that the Ethiopian economy could potentially lose billions of dollars annually due to child marriage. In contrast, ending the practice of child marriage would have a large positive effect on the educational attainment of girls and their children, reduce population growth, and increase women's expected earnings and household welfare. The report is part of a global programme of work funded by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, the Children's Investment Fund Foundation, and the Global Partnership for Education. Child marriage (marriage before the age of 18) remains high in Ethiopia, affecting more than one in three girls. In addition, almost one in five girls gives birth before the age of 18. In Ethiopia, about four out of five early childbirths (children born to a mother younger than 18) are attributed to child marriage. The report estimates that a girl marrying at 13 will have on average 24 per cent more children over her lifetime than if she had married at age 18 or later. Ending child marriage could reduce total fertility rates by 13 per cent nationally, leading to reductions in population growth over time. The analysis suggests that by 2030, gains in annual welfare thanks to higher gross domestic product (GDP) per capita from lower population growth could reach close to $5 billion in Ethiopia. Child brides are much more likely to drop out of school and complete fewer years of education than their peers who marry later. This affects in turn the education of their children. The report suggests that keeping girls in school is one of the best ways to avoid child marriage and early childbearing. In Ethiopia, each year of secondary education may reduce the likelihood of child marriage by six percentage points. Child marriage has a negative impact on the health and well-being of women, including by increasing the risk of intimate partner violence and negatively affecting their psychological well-being. Ending child marriage, on the other hand, could reduce rates of under-five mortality and stunting among children. Another important benefit from ending child marriage would be an increase in women's expected earnings in the labour market. In part because they tend to drop out of school once married, child brides earn on average less than the girls who marry later on. The losses in earnings today for women in Ethiopia due to past child marriages is estimated at $1.6 billion. Finally, budget savings would be reaped by the government in the cost of providing basic education, health, and other services. In Ethiopia, as in other countries, thanks to lower population growth from ending child marriage, the cost for the government of providing basic services would be reduced, with larger savings over time.

Common Service Centre to reach 2.50 lakh gram panchayats

700 digital villages to be established by year-end

AAT News Service

THE network of Common Service Centres (CSCs), which act as access points for delivery of various electronic services to villages in India, are set to be expanded to 2.50 lakh gram panchayats by year-end, said the Union Minister for Electronics and Information Technology, Ravi Shankar Prasad.

Addressing, an event in Dhanauri Kalan village in Gautam Budh Nagar (Uttar Pradesh) to showcase a host of digital services that will now be available in the digital village Mr Prasad said, CSC movement had transformed into a movement of change bringing services like banking, pensions, digital literacy and telemedicine to rural and remote villages through electronic infrastructure.

The Union Minister for Culture, Mahesh Sharma, said the CSC project is providing sustainable digital access to rural communities and are giving the necessary impetus for upliftment of rural community.

Positioned as strategic cornerstones of Digital India programme, the CSC model has adopted six villages in the country in the pilot phase. DigiGaon or Digital Village is conceptualised as a connected village where citizens can avail various e-Services of the Central government, state governments and private players in rural and remote villages in the country.

These DigiGaons are projected to be change agents, promoting rural entrepreneurship and building rural capacities and livelihoods through community participation and collective action. The digital villages have been equipped with solar lighting facility in their community centre, LED assembly unit, sanitary napkin unit (with active participation of Asha and anganwadi workers) and Wi-fi choupal (rural wi-fi infrastructure and a slew of suitable applications).

These villages would also have the regular CSC services like banking, health, education, financial services, and a host of other services. In the initial phase, villages Piyala and Dayalpur (in Haryana), Chandanki East and Shivabudhi (in Jharkhand) and Dhanauri Kalan and Sultanpur (in Uttar Pradesh) have been chosen for the pilot project.

Project to support Assn of South East Asian Nations

AAT News Service

AS announced by the Prime Minister, Narendra Modi, in the India-ASEAN (Association of South East Asian Nations) Summit in October 2010, Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) is pursuing a proposal to support ASEAN countries to receive and process data from Indian remote sensing satellites (RESOURCE-SAT-2 and OCEANSAT-2) and also to provide training in space science, technology and applications.

All the 10 members of ASEAN, viz., Brunei Darussalam, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam, will get benefitted from this project, said the Union Minister of State for the Ministry of Development of North Eastern Region (DoNER), MoS PMO, Personnel, Public Grievances & Pensions, Atomic Energy and Space, Jitendra Singh.

India pursues international co-operation in peaceful uses of outer space with space agencies of 43 nations and five multilateral bodies. As part of this, ISRO keeps developing new products and services, jointly with partnering agencies, through joint missions, scientific instruments accommodation, data sharing and exchange of expertise.

ISRO has built and launched 'South Asia Satellite' to provide satellite communication services to individual South Asian nations and also across the region, he said.

India participates in international disaster management mechanisms including International Charter 'Space and Major Disasters', Sentinel Asia programme of Asia Pacific Regional Space Agency Forum (APRSAP), UN Economic and Social Commission for Asia and Pacific (UNESCAP) and UN Platform for Space based Information for Disaster management and Emergency Response (UNSPIDER).

India, as a member of the international COSPAS-SARSAT system for search and rescue operations, provides distress alert and position location services to India and seven neighbouring countries. The country has also been providing training programmes on space technology applications to officials from other countries, said Mr Singh.

Venkaiah calls for scientific renaissance in the country

AAT News Service

THERE is need for a scientific renaissance in the country and the excellence and quest for the best should be the goal posts of new India, said the Vice-President, M Venkaiah Naidu. He was addressing the 9th Indian Youth Science Congress at Career Point University in Hamirpur, Himachal Pradesh.

The spirit of enquiry and the spirit of enhancing public well being should be the guiding principles. Mr Naidu called on young minds to creatively engage with issues like poverty, illiteracy, ill health, poor returns from agriculture and others. "We need governments that focus on science for development. We need a transformation in the way we run our educational and scientific institutions," he said.

Young India has the ability to see beyond the obvious and ask relevant questions that a scientist will ask and "we need more young people to develop these abilities. The new India that we collectively dream of will be possible only if the children and youth of our country develop the scientific attitude."

New India can only be built with new ideas and new ways of making them real through effective implementation. New India will be a scientific India and it will be a technological India. It will be an India that will be sustained by knowledge and science, what is called as 'Gyana' and 'Vigyan' in Indian parlance, he said.

The country needs total revamp of school education as well as higher education adding that science should be an integral component of the curriculum. Scientific approach that relies on evidence and raising relevant questions and seeking answers should be internalised.

Students should be encouraged to discover rather than be told the answers and rote memorisation should be discouraged. "We have to bring back the fun into the learning process and the joy of knowing, the joy of discovering, and the joy of innovating lies at the core of scientific temper. This should be the heart of schooling and educational processes at various levels," he said.

Quoting Confucius, the Vice-President said teaching, learning process should be reoriented keeping in view the basic principles encapsulated in his famous saying "I learn and I forget; I see and I remember; I do and I understand".

"Higher education institutions must focus on research and problem solving and children should be given ample opportunities to do experiments not merely read about them from a book. We need more laboratories and project-based, problem-based teaching approaches," added the Vice-President.
