THE Central government would digitally reconstruct 20 historic monuments using 3D technology in the next two years and put them in Delhi, said a top government official.

"By 3D printing we can recreate Taj Mahal, Ghats of Benares, Buddhist Circuit and any heritage or any monument. So tourists coming in can see and decide exactly what one would have seen if one was actually walking there and it would give information like a tourist guide.

"You can stop, climb up, can change the perspective, or the sky be it morning or night sky as it depends on how you are going to view it," said Mr Sharma.

He also informed that the government is going to launch a huge mission on cyber physical systems which is three layered pects, incubators, start-ups in this particular area thereby commercialising the technology which comes out of there," said the Secretary.

Explaining about the same, he said "when we started thinking about AI in the DST about two-and-a-half years ago, we started in a modest way by putting in couple of hundred crores and now we are going to scale up those efforts on several thousand-crore level in a very holistic

Mr Sharma also urged the industry for robust participation and partnership in this mission. "There would be huge opportunities for industry to leverage infrastructure and human resources that will be developed through this mission."

He also informed that DST along with Intel had started a ₹ 35-crore-worth project on intelligent sensors for air and water quality under the public-private partnership (PPP) mode. "Sci-can actually tell the quality of soil, moisture in soil, see if it needs more nitrogen fertiliser, look at the quality of crop, and see if it is ready for harvesting."

The DST Secretary also informed that government is committed to get all the digital data compiled by the Survey of India (a 250-year-old organisation under DST) and would be made available to every citizen in the country which would help in comparing information about things

Govt to recreate 20 monuments using 3D tech in two years

what they like and where they want to go," said Ashutosh Sharma, Secretary, Department of Science and Technology (DST), while inaugurating an Assocham international conference on 'Artificial Intelligence (AI)'.

Using 3D technology one can track/decide own path with the help of a laser light and it would seem as if one was visiting that monument and could see and has 25 Centers of Excellence focussed on each sector with basic knowledge layers, algorithms of AI and a fusion layer in between which is the physical layer, i.e. the machine, robots, actuators, sensors in different contexts.

"This mission will cover from basic fundamental knowledge generation R&D to technology development, translational as-way in the entire spectrum of AI that covers everything from theme knowledge generation in AI areas of deep learning, machine learning, contextual learning and all varieties of AI that one can think about."

He further said that it would basically be an end-to-end system which is integrated from discovery science to solution science.

entists here and in the US are working on cutting-edge technology to make smart pebbles, which are small miniaturised sensors having on-board power, communication and sensing of whatever you want in air or water."

Talking about another big project supported by DST, he said it was about having infrared (IR) sensing to get hyperspectrum analysis of soil, and vegetation, crop. "You get a map based on this and with AI you like climate, environmental changes and others.

"So every local governance body can actually access and use this data for their developmental and governance-related activities," added Mr Sharma.

In his address, R Raman, Mission Director, Atal Innovation Mission – a national innovation initiative NITI Aayog – said AI would not lead to loss of jobs, instead it would generate various employment opportunities in different domains.

Investors hand over severe punishment to corps for lack of governance

AAT News Service

THE Indian stock market is showing an increasing tendency for a zero tolerance for any perceived dishonesty on the part of companies, expecting them to remain fully transparent and compliant in corporate governance and has severely punished the companies faltering on transparency, the industry apex body Assocham observed. It cautioned promoters to remain committed to enhancing shareholders' value.

"Gone are the days when a firm or its promoters could get away with practices which do not follow the best of standards. Thanks to increasing awareness among the investors and strict disclosure norms, one cannot afford any wrong doing, knowingly or unknowingly," the Chamber said in the backdrop of a few recent examples where share prices of some companies saw wild fluctuations and erosion in wealth on suspicions of unfair transactions.

The Assocham said predominance of the foreign portfolio investors, large number of domestic mutual funds with enough clout in the market, have also led to a situation where the punishment for any act can be severe in terms of wealth erosion.

"So, the companies listed in the stock market have to be extra careful in ensuring that corporate governance standards are in line with the best international practices. In fact, the stock investor is willing to give a handsome premium on the quality of promoters, boards and the CEOs," said D S Rawat, Secretary General, Assocham.

"Since majority of the shareholding is held by the promoters, it is in their interest that their firms are run in the most transparent manner. Extra care should be taken with regard to correct and transparent valuations for all the inter-group transactions," added Mr Rawat.

Credit must also be given to the regulator, SEBI, for ensuring that the companies are made to provide all material disclosures which have a bearing on the stock prices. Things like change in the top management, any allegations of wrong doing, must be responded to in the filings to the stock exchanges so that investors remain fully cognizant of the developments in the companies, they have stake in, said the Assocham.

THE World Bank Board of Executive Directors approved a $250-million National Rural Economic Transformation Project (NRETP) in India to help rural households shift to a new generation of economic initiatives by developing viable (NRLP), which is currently being implemented across 13 states, 162 districts and 575 blocks. So far, the project has mobilised more than 8.8-million women from poor rural households into 7,50,000 self-help groups (SHGs).

While these 13 states will continue to be supported under mercial crops and livestock products, and fisheries.

The project will improve the productivity of their crops; adopt climate-smart technologies and practices; and access timely market information. Technical assistance, skills building and investment support, under the project, will enable such farmer-

Junaid Ahmad, World Bank Country Director for India. "The new project will bring more women into the SHG fold and help them engage purposefully in an evolving rural economy," he added.

In partnerships with the private sector, technical service providers and state governments, the project will support investments that lead to higher value addition in agriculture such as skills and infrastructure for grading, sorting, food handling and hygiene, processing, storage and warehousing.

The other key components of the project include youth skills development, in co-ordination with the Deen Dayal Upadhyaya Grameen Kaushalya Yojana; develop financial products and services to help small producer collectives engage with the market, for example through digital financial services; and learn from similar and successful regional and international programmes.

NRLP has mobilised close to 9-million rural women into strong self-managed institutional platforms, helping them access services, participate in gram sabhas and start engaging in income-generating activities

Peer-to-peer learning across states and across communities was a successful strategy under the NRLP and will also continue to be used in this project.

"This project aspires to transform the economic participation of SHGs and rural women entrepreneurs by helping them engage on a strong footing with formal private financing, expand women-owned and women-managed enterprises and increase women's labour force participation in viable agriculture and non-farm economic activities," said Gayatri Acharya, Lead Rural Development Economist and World Bank's Task Team Leader for the project.

World Bank Board approves $250-million project to boost rural income in 13 states enterprises for farm and non-farm products.

A key focus of the project will be to promote women-owned and women-led farm and non-farm enterprises across value chains; enable them to build businesses that help them access finance, markets and networks; and generate employment.

The project is an additional financing to the $500-million National Rural Livelihoods Project the new project approved now, 125 new districts will be added from within these states, which are expected to increase the reach of the project to another 5-million rural households.

Building on the strength of the SHG's institutional base built over the last three years, the NRETP will continue to strengthen women-owned and women-led producer collectives diversify into high-value farm and non-farm commodities such as com-owned and farmer-led organisations make informed investment decisions.

"The NRLP has mobilised close to 9-million rural women into strong self-managed institutional platforms, helping them access services, participate in gram sabhas and start engaging in income-generating activities. Many of these women are now geared towards moving into higher order economic initiatives in farm and non-farm sectors," said
