Digital Advantage

INDIA'S digital drive, riding on communication, IT and financial services has caught fancy of foreign investors, as reflected in over $20-billion foreign direct investment (FDI) flowing in these sectors alone in the fiscal 2017-18, observes an analysis by the industry apex body, ASSOCHAM. With emergence of aggressive online market dominated by some of the strong home-grown entrepreneurs and overseas giants like Amazon and Walmart along with global private equity and venture funds, the entire pack of communication services, retail and wholesale trade, financial and computer services has emerged as one of the most sought after areas of interest for foreign investors, as suggested by the RBI data. Against $5.87 billion in 2016-17, the FDI flows into the communications services alone amounted to $8.80 billion in fiscal 2017-18. Likewise, the FDI inflows catapulted from $2.77 billion to $4.47 billion in retail and wholesale trade in these years. The financial services saw the inflows jump from $3.73 billion to $4.07 billion and computer services from $1.93 billion to $3.17 billion. "The fact that these sectors have accounted for more than 50 per cent of the total FDI of $37.36 billion in 2017-18 reflects the kind of global interest being generated into the new areas of economy, including online marketplace and fintechs (financial technologies). With a fast pace of financialisation of the Indian economy, investment in the technology-driven trade in goods and services would only increase, both from the overseas and domestic services. Besides, a lot more new entrepreneurship is coming up in the new economy which is set to encompass more areas of traditional sectors," says the paper. As for real estate sector, in spite of the slow growth in the sector, FDI interest in realty activities showed a marked improvement. The inflows into the real estate sector saw an almost four-fold increase from $105 million to $405 million. The other areas of increased interest to foreign investors included general business services ($3 billion inflows in 2017-18 from $2.68 billion), electricity including distribution and transmission ($1.87 billion from $1.72 billion). "With several key indicators like corporate earnings, uptick in top line and consumer demand showing a marked improvement on the back of good and well-spread monsoon, the investment sentiment is expected to gain momentum in the next few quarters and would further improve in the financial year 2019-20," points out the paper. Some of the macroeconomic issues like crude oil prices and volatility in the foreign exchange market are also expected to play out without causing much problem to the Indian economy, which has built enough resilience and is armed with robust foreign exchange reserves of about $400 billion to absorb such headwinds. The domestic push would be far greater, going forward, while a robust US economy, a major destination for the Indian exports, along with other key markets in Europe and Asia would keep up the momentum.

SOMNATH Chatterjee was the 'Bhadralok (gentleman) Communist' and did not belong to the legion of hardcore, dogmatic apparatchiks. In fact, he was from the breed of aristocratic, foreign bred, legal luminaries. In 2004 during the UPA-I government, he earned the distinction of being the first communist to become the Lok Sabha Speaker.

"For my part, I was determined to work relentlessly to improve the image of Parliament and its members. I held the scales evenly for all sections of the House and did not discriminate among members on the basis of their political affiliations."

"As I had stated on assumption of office, I believed in the imperative of a strong Opposition in a legislative body for the effective functioning of the parliamentary system of governance. The primary duty of a watchful and alert Opposition was to highlight the deficiencies in the performance of the government. However, to be impactful the Opposition must be committed to the basic principles of parliamentary democracy, acknowledging the important role of the Parliament," said Chatterjee.

"The Opposition should not indulge in criticism for the sake of criticism, but play a constructive role and be conscious that parliamentary democracy must be attuned to the most important task of strengthening the nation and sustaining the unity of the people and integrity of the country," he had said.

His strict conduct of proceedings as the Speaker earned him the sobriquet of 'headmaster' and his admonitions for unruly members came to be widely quoted and became part of public debate.

Adjournments within a few minutes of the House sitting, and sometimes also witnessed by visiting foreign delegations, embarrassed him acutely.

"That the 14th Lok Sabha turned out quite differently is the source of my greatest dissatisfaction and disappointment. In moments of agony, I described it as the worst phase of my political career. My valedictory speech on February 26, 2009 mirrors the highs and lows of a tumultuous phase in our parliamentary history and seeks an honest introspection on the future of democracy in our country," he regretted.

"The admonitions I handed down from the Chair at regular intervals are eloquent. They earned me the sobriquet of 'headmaster', which I did not mind as the position of a headmaster is an honourable one,"

Well of the House and refuse to budge, Chatterjee would warn them: "Are you not ashamed of yourselves? What are you doing? Is this the way Members of Parliament (MPs) should behave? You have no right to be here."

He also mentioned how foreign delegations were not impressed by what the parliamentarians did in India.

"A Norwegian delegation put a charitable gloss on the disruptions by terming it as an ex-democracy in this country. It is a matter of great sorrow for me."

His strongest words would be, "I think the Parliament of India is reaching its lowest position - nadir. The whole country is ashamed of the parliamentarians."

He would also sarcastically tell, "this House of People should be adjourned sine die. People's money will be saved. Useless allowances should not be given to all of you. I think that is the July 2008, Chatterjee refused to step down from his position holding that the Speaker's post is above any party politics. He was subsequently suspended. He had described that day as "one of the saddest days of my life".

He was also instrumental in bringing Parliament closer to the people and on his initiative the proceedings of the Zero Hour were telecast live from July 5, 2004. A full-fledged 24-hour Lok Sabha Television Channel also came into being in July 2006 during his tenure as speaker.

On disruptions, he wrote in his book, "out of 1,738 hours and 45 minutes, the fourteenth Lok Sabha wasted 423 hours because of disruptions and adjournments due to disorderly scenes. This amounted to 24 per cent of the time of the House, which constituted an all-time alarming record. The cost to the public exchequer was unacceptable and justifiably drew a lot of trenchant criticism from all quarters. Harping on holding sittings of Parliament for at least 100 days in a year was meaningless if members could not conduct themselves in a befitting manner in the days that the House actually did sit."

"I felt let down that important matters were not taken up for serious deliberation by the members purely for extraneous considerations. What suffered was Parliament's standing as an institution and the country's governance. This has had a long-term negative effect on our polity. While there was some outcry in the media about it, it was clearly not enough to get the members to mend their unacceptable ways."

"The 'right to recall', which I had been ceaselessly advocating for citizens, may have been a deterrent but it did not find adequate support. I also felt that disruptions were tantamount to contempt of parliamentary democracy, but who bothered to take it to heart?" he wrote.

Chatterjee passed away on August 13, 2018 in Kolkata following multiple organ failure. He was 89.

HEADMASTER Of Lok Sabha

the CPI(M) leader wrote in his autobiography Keeping The Faith: Memoirs Of A Parliamentarian that was published in 2010.

He mentions several of his admonitions in the book. "I can only say that more and more we are showing that we are not fit for democracy," "I know the Chair has no respect in this House. We have sufficiently decimated its authority," "People are looking at us. We are fighting for more money for ourselves. I thought that people will say 'No work No pay,' were some of these."

When members come to the ample of our democratic vibrancy! The Swedish Speaker, who was on a visit, expressed his hope that his members would not learn from my members!" he wrote in the book.

Sometimes, Chatterjee seemed to get emotional while dealing with MPs as he used to tell them, "now if any member wants to do whatever he or she likes, then there is neither the necessity of the Chair nor the list of business nor the rules."

Or at times he would say, "I am sorry I have to say that you are all working overtime to finish best thing to do. You do not deserve one paisa out of public money."

Chatterjee often rued that important matters were not taken up for serious deliberation by the members purely for extraneous considerations. Perhaps his biggest setback came on July 23, 2008 when he was expelled by the CPI(M) for "seriously compromising the position of the party".

After the CPI(M), then under the general secretaryship of Prakash Karat, withdrew support from the UPA government in

THE World Bank has mandated the Commonwealth Bank of Australia (CBA) as the sole arranger of the first blockchain bond globally to be created, allocated, transferred and managed through its life cycle using distributed ledger technology.

Consensus among states on interlinking of rivers vital

AAT News Service

THE Union Minister for Water Resources, River Development and Ganga Rejuvenation, Nitin Gadkari stressed on the need to develop consensus amongst the concerned states on interlinking of rivers so that the water draining unutilised into the sea could be utilised for the needy areas. He called upon states to discuss and sort out issues through active consultation so that the projects can be implemented on priority.

Reiterating that the project for interlinking of rivers is very important for enhancing water and food security of the country and essential for providing water to drought prone and water deficit areas, Mr Gadkari said steps have been taken for early implementation of five interlinking projects and memorandum of agreement for implementation of these projects is being finalised in consultation with the concerned state governments.

These five projects include Ken-Betwa link project, Daman-ganga-Pinjal link project, Par-

Tapi-Narmada link project, Godavari-Cauvery (Grand Anicut) link project and Parvati-Kali Sindhu-Chambal link. National Water Development Agency (NWDA) so far received 47 proposals of intra-state links from nine states viz Maharashtra, Gujarat, Jharkhand, Odisha, Bihar, Rajasthan, Tamil Nadu, Karnataka and Chhattisgarh. The successful completion of these projects will lead to reduction in disaster during floods, improved irrigation facilities, employment generation in rural agriculture, and increase in exports and decrease in migration from villages.

Mr Gadkari also suggested that it is high time to think about a proper legal mechanism to resolve inter-state and Centre-state issues in interlinking of river projects. He added that river interlinking projects envisage that the surplus water available in the Himalayan rivers be transferred to the areas where water supply is not adequate in the peninsular India. However, huge quantities of water from several peninsular rivers drain unutilised into the sea, and river interlinking projects are seriously looking at transfer of this water to water deficit areas of peninsular India.

Mr Gadkari requested the ministers of various states to identify the river basins which have surplus water availability in their states after meeting all demands, from where water can be transferred to deficit areas so that drought in those areas can be mitigated, agricultural production could be increased, resulting in the upliftment of socio-economic profile of the country.

The Union Minister of State for Water Resources, River Development and Ganga Rejuvenation, Arjun Ram Meghwal said, many local issues were sorted out by healthy discussions during the regional conferences which were held in the past few months. He said, such conferences and follow-up meetings should be promoted.

Representatives of the state governments said the Centre should take them on board while preparing detailed project reports related to interlinking of river projects to avoid any unnecessary delay.

AS his wife Nadira said, Vidiadhar Surajprasad Naipaul was a giant in all that he achieved and lived a life which was full of wonderful creativity and endeavour. The literary world was in for a huge shock when his family announced on August 12, 2018

Singh became anxious to find someone who would not embarrass him by not knowing who Naipaul was. "I am pretty certain that was not more than two or three of Rajiv's cabinet ministers have ever heard anything by Naipaul. ## The Man Who Made Writing In English Global

According to Naipaul fiction never lies and reveals a writer totally, but an autobiography "can distort; facts can be realigned" that the Trinidad-born Indian-origin author, known for his critical commentary on colonialism, religion and politics, died at the age of 85 a day earlier in his London home. Naipaul, born on August 17, 1932, lived most of his life in England. He grew up in relative poverty in Trinidad before moving to England at the age of 18 after receiving a scholarship in the University College, Oxford. His first work of literature did not come easily.

He wrote a novel while at the Oxford University but it was not published and he battled with depression, and even attempted suicide, during his struggling student days. He left uni-first book The Mystic Masseur came in 1951. His most celebrated novel, A House for Mr Biswas, based on the life of his father Seepersad Naipaul, who was a reporter for the Trinidad Guardian, was published in 1961.

Naipaul went on to become one of the early winners of the Booker Prize for In A Free State in 1971. Among his other well-known works were those on Islamic fundamentalism — the 1981 work Among The Believers and the 1998 book Beyond Belief. Naipaul, known as a master of the English language, explored colonialism in his many famous works. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 2001 istani journalist Nadira Khanum Alvi, many years his junior.

Naipaul may have produced masterpieces in both fiction and non-fiction, but he never attempted his autobiography saying it can distort facts. According to Naipaul, fiction never lies and reveals a writer totally. But an autobiography, he felt, "can distort; facts can be realigned". In 2008, Patrick French came out with The World is What It Is: the Authorized Biography of V S Naipaul, in which he examined among other things the legendary author's life within a displaced community and his fierce ambition at school.

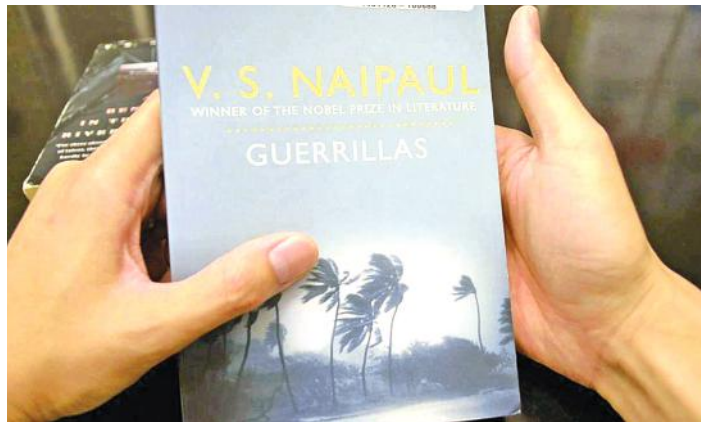

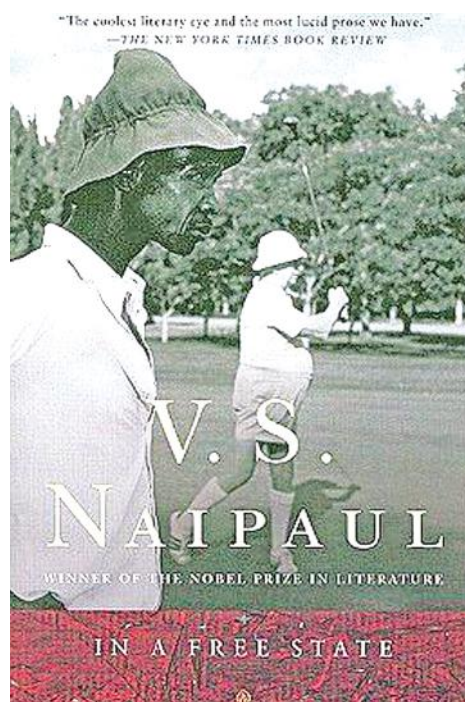

He also describes how, on

It was an apposite name for the boy. Years later, as V S Naipaul, he would say, it's such a grand name, a very special name — I cherished it for that reason. I think great things were expected of me," French writes in his book.

Naipaul came to India quite a number of times, the last being for the Jaipur Literature Festival (JLF) in January 2015. At the JLF session, he narrated what his mother had to say to him on writing about India. "The only Hindi word my mother carried from India was 'beta' and she said, beta please leave India to the Indians."

His books on India included An Area of Darkness and A Wounded Civilisation. He also wrote the India trilogy — An Area of Darkness (1964), which relates

it. I didn't know how to move in India, but eventually I had to find my way," he had said.

In India, A Million Mutinies Now, Naipaul among other things writes about his ancestors and overseas Indian groups. "They were miniature Indias, with hindus and muslims, and people of different castes. They were disadvantaged, without representation, and without a political tradition. They were isolated by language and culture from the people they found themselves

During a visit to India, Naipaul was once so awestruck by Congress minister Ram Niwas Mirdha's knowledge of his books that he wondered what this "extraordinary kind of fellow" and "civilised man" was doing in politics. The visit was when Rajiv Gandhi was the prime minister in the mid-80s.

Naipaul wanted to meet some senior politicians with whom he could discuss India's political and economic scene and conveyed this to seasoned in one edition of his iconic column With Malice Towards One And All... And Mirdha did not let Singh down and Naipaul was pleasantly surprised to discover that Mirdha had read everything he had written. "He did not say so himself, but whenever Naipaul made an observation, Mirdha replied by quoting him," "... As you wrote in The Area of Darkness Mr Naipaul... you might recall your earlier observation in The Mimic Men," wrote Singh. On his way back to hotel, Naipaul asked Singh, "What is a civilised man like Mirdha doing in politics?" To this Singh replied, "I haven't the foggiest idea except that whatever he's been given to do, he's done well. He's led dozens of delegations to international conferences, been chairman of Lalit Kala Akademi and is into sports as well — youth camps, Olympics and that sort of thing." Naipaul then sighed, "Extraordinary kind of fellow."
