UAE to allow retired expats to stay back with 5-yr visas

Eligibility: Property investments worth ₹ 3.9 cr; or minimum savings of ₹ 1.97 cr; or monthly income of ₹ 3.94 lakh

Our UAE Correspondent

THE UAE has announced a new visa policy allowing expatriates aged over 55 years to stay back in the country on five-year renewable retirement visas.

Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Vice-President and Prime Minister of the UAE and Ruler of the Emirate of Dubai, has announced that expats in the UAE will be allowed to stay in the country for a longer period of time. The policy will come into effect from next year.

Under the new policy, retiree expats will qualify for the visa if they have property investments worth Dhs 2 million ($5,44,410; ₹ 3.9 crore), or have savings of a minimum of Dhs 1 million ($2,72,255; ₹ 1.97 crore), or if they have an active income of Dhs 20,000 ($5,445; ₹ 3.94 lakh) per month.

The UAE is home to around 8-million expatriates. The new policy follows a number of similar changes earlier this year that have affected expat visas. In May this year, it was announced that investors and specialists such as doctors and engineers, including their families, will receive UAE residency visas valid for up to 10 years. Top-performing students are also eligible for the 10-year visa scheme.

The Cabinet had also introduced a new visa policy aimed at jobseekers and investors, and also granted free entry for transit passengers laying over through the country's airports.

The announcement came as the Cabinet also launched sweeping resolutions to support the country's industrial sector by reducing electrical consumption fees for industrial facilities such as factories.

Furthermore, a new investment law allowing 100 per cent foreign ownership is also expected to be approved by the end of the year.

Expats in UAE hailed the retiree visa.

Yusuff Ali MA, Chairman and MD of LuLu Group International, called the retirement visa scheme as "another shining example of visionary leadership's humanitarian initiative".

"The safe and secure environment, world-class health-care facilities, a very tolerant society, international standard lifestyle options and excellent air connectivity are some of the biggest reasons why the world loves to come to the UAE," he said.

Dr Azad Moopen, Founder Chairman and MD of Aster DM Healthcare, said: "I am very happy to see various positive measures announced. There is also a decision by the Cabinet for streamlining medical services in the country as well as to provide reduced tariff for electricity. I sincerely hope that this tariff reduction shall be extended to the healthcare in view of the strategic importance of the sector."

Long-working hours remain problem for expats in Qatar

18,500 Qatar World Cup labourers said to work up to 148 days in a row

Our Qatar Correspondent

MIGRANT labourers in Qatar have worked up to 148 days in a row, a report into conditions faced by workers building stadiums for the 2022 FIFA World Cup has found. A London-based consultancy firm, Impactt, said long working hours remained a problem for many of the 18,500 workers at projects overseen by Qatar's World Cup organisers, the Supreme Committee for Delivery & Legacy.

Impactt – contracted by the Supreme Committee to carry out an annual labour review – said 13 out of 19 World Cup contractors were overworking their employees. "At 8 of 19 contractors, these non-compliances were critical, as working hours exceeded 72 per week and overtime exceeded two hours per day," Impactt said in its report.

"The most extreme case found was 14 hours within a day...(and) 402 hours within a month. Additional non-compliances include 8 contractors where workers worked an excessive number of consecutive days without a rest day. The most extreme cases were found at 1 contractor where 3 workers worked between 124 and 148 consecutive days without a rest day," it added.

Under Qatari law, workers should complete a 48-hour week, equivalent to 8 hours per day. They can also work extra 2 hours a day overtime and should have at least 1 rest day per week.

Similar findings were reached in Impactt's first Qatar audit last year. However, it praised the Supreme Committee for introducing an initiative which reimburses workers who pay recruitment fees to agents before they get to Qatar.

"This ground-breaking 'Universal Payment' approach will impact 1,700 workers, equivalent to 10 per cent of the total workforce at SC sites," it said. The reimbursements were worth around $8,24,000, it said.

Doha says it has made great strides in labour relations in recent years, including the 'abolition' of the kafala system which ties a worker to a sponsor and the introduction of a minimum wage. But Amnesty International says migrant workers in Qatar, who number more than 2 million, continue to face widespread exploitation.

India gets 39% of total remittances from UAE

Expat remittances from UAE up 13 per cent to $23.96 bn in six months; India's share ₹ 33,956 cr

Our UAE Correspondent

EXPATRIATE remittances from the UAE totalled Dhs 88 billion ($23.96 billion) in the first half of 2018, a 13.1 per cent growth from the Dhs 77.8 billion ($21.18 billion) recorded during the same period in 2017, according to figures from the Central Bank.

The figures are a 13 per cent increase on last year, which saw $21.2 billion (Dhs 78 billion) sent by expatriates to foreign countries during the first six months of 2017.

India received the most remittances during the second quarter, with Dhs 17.32 billion (₹ 33,956 crore), or 39 per cent of the total.

According to the figures, remittances in first quarter this year hit Dhs 43.5 billion ($11.84 billion), representing 17.3 per cent year-on-year growth.

In the second quarter, foreign remittances jumped to Dhs 44.4 billion ($12.09 billion), a growth of 8.8 per cent from Dhs 40.7 billion ($11.08 billion) recorded during the same time period in 2017.

Of the Q2 total, Dhs 34.8 billion ($9.47 billion) was transferred through money exchange houses, compared to Dhs 9.6 billion ($2.61 billion) that went through banks.

Dhs 8.5 billion was received by Pakistan (8.5 per cent), Dhs 3.15 billion by the Philippines (7.1 per cent), Dhs 2.4 billion by Egypt (5.4 per cent), Dhs 1.95 per cent by the US (4.9 per cent) and Dhs 1.95 billion by the UK (3.8 per cent).

EU Social Policies

LABOUR, taxation and social welfare policies in the European Union (EU) must be upgraded to protect vulnerable workers and tackle rising inequality brought about by rapidly changing labour markets and new technologies, says a new World Bank report titled, 'Toward a New Social Contract: Taking on Distributional Tensions in Europe and Central Asia'. The report calls for a fundamental rethink of social policies in order to slow the growing divide between citizens who benefit from new economic opportunities and those who are left behind in an ever more dynamic and flexible economy. The report finds that large groups still have middle-class incomes, but not middle-class economic security. In some European Union member states, the daily income level needed to avoid slipping into poverty has doubled. At the same time, more young people are in lower quality jobs compared to older generations. For instance, half of young workers (aged between 15 and 24) in the Netherlands and France work with temporary contracts. "Long-term wage employment is no longer the norm, especially for younger people, and we need to better understand how inequality is evolving and how to make growth more inclusive," says Cyril Muller, World Bank Vice President for Europe and Central Asia. To address the challenges, the World Bank recommends implementing three overall policy approaches: increasing protections for all types of labour contracts; rolling out universal welfare systems with better social services/safety nets; and expanding tax bases away from an income and expenditure-only model to include capital gains and higher earners. Many citizens in the European Union are still not experiencing upward mobility and feel stuck in an inequality trap. Ineffective policies in these areas has led to a decline in institutional trust and greater polarisation within society. "When we ask people about their well-being, we hear concerns about rising inequality and insecurity. This report investigates the causes of these concerns by analysing the changes in income distribution in recent decades," says Maurizio Bussolo, World Bank Lead Economist for the Europe and Central Asia region and co-author of the report. "We believe trying to stop globalisation or technology is not the solution. Instead, a new social contract, with a fairer way of sharing risks and opportunities, is needed to preserve and expand the impressive economic gains the region has made in past decades." The report identifies four types of inequality among groups that are eroding social contracts: disparities between young and old generations; inequalities between workers engaged in different occupations; unequal access to opportunities based on geography; and inequalities based on gender, ethnicity, background and other factors, rather than individual efforts or abilities. Building on earlier reports, including the recently published report titled Growing United, the latest World Bank study emphasises that policies should be adapted to protect and accelerate the remarkable social advances made by countries in the European Union in recent decades.

BY insisting on a return to paper ballots replacing the Electronic Voting Machines (EVMs) for the coming national elections, is the Indian opposition trying to turn the clock back and stall the march of technology into the most crucial area of elected democracy? The issue came up for discussion at an all-party convened by the Election Commission of India (ECI) on August 27 to discuss electoral reforms.

The EVMs have been used in India with total success in the conduct of three general elections in 2004, 2009 and 2014 and 107 state-level polls since the machines were introduced in the year 2000. Two of the three national elections were won by the Congress party in 2004 and 2009 while one by the Bharatiya Janata Party in 2014. Many of the elections to state legislative assemblies, where EVMs were used, were won by the parties which are now opposing the machines.

They included the Congress in Punjab and Goa, Trinamool Congress in West Bengal not once but twice in 2011 and 2016, Janata Dal (United) - Rashtriya Janata Dal in Bihar in 2015 and Aam Aadmi Party in Delhi. Ironically, it was Trinamool Congress which never let go an opportunity to accuse its arch rival the Left parties (when the Left was in power in West Bengal for 34 years) of capturing polling and paper ballots and pitched for EVMs.

True, sporadic instances of complaints by political parties and activists about the EVMs have surfaced almost ever since they were introduced. But there has never been any specific allegation which would undermine the EVMs. In fact, the EVMs have stood the test of legal and technical scrutiny a number of times which enhanced to the credibility of the electoral exercise.

It was in December, 1977 that the Election Commission of India (ECI) first came up with the proposal of EVMs with the stated objective of overcoming certain problems associated with use of ballot papers. First, ballot papers increased the chances of electoral malpractices like booth capturing and ballot-box stuffing. Second, technology has ensured that people cast their votes correctly totally obviating the possibilities of invalid votes.

India had to wait for eleven years before the relevant law was amended by Parliament in December, 1988 when a new missed appeals filed by some petitioners against the High Courts' orders. The Karnataka High Court had held that "this invention (EVM) is undoubtedly a great achievement in the electronic and computer technology and a national pride".

Both the Karnataka High Court and the Madras High Court observed that use of EVMs in section 61A was inserted in the Representation of the People Act, 1951, empowering the Election Commission to use electronic voting machines. The amended provision went into force from March 15, 1989.

The issue of possible tampering of EVM has been flagged before various High Courts between 2001 and 2004. The High Courts, after going into all aspects of the technological soundness and the administrative measures involved in the use of EVMs, have unequivocally concluded that the EVMs in India are credible, reliable and totally tamper-proof.

section 61A was inserted in the Representation of the People Act, 1951, empowering the Election Commission to use electronic voting machines. The amended provision went into force from March 15, 1989.

The issue of possible tampering of EVM has been flagged before various High Courts between 2001 and 2004. The High Courts, after going into all aspects of the technological soundness and the administrative measures involved in the use of EVMs, have unequivocally concluded that the EVMs in India are credible, reliable and totally tamper-proof.

In some of these cases, even the Supreme Court has dis-them to approach the EC.

In a landmark move, the EC invited those who had voiced reservations about the Electronic Voting Machine to demonstrate the points made in their allegations in August, 2009. Those invited included political parties, petitioners before various courts and some individuals who had been writing to the Commission on this issue. One hundred EVMs brought from ten states were kept at the Commission's office for scrutiny. However, none of the persons, who were given the opportunity, could actually demonstrate any tamperability of the EVMs. They either failed or chose not to demonstrate.

The row over EVMs surfaced again in March 2017 after the Bharatiya Janata Party's remarkable victory in Uttar Pradesh state elections. The first to raise doubts about EVM was Bahujan Samaj Party chief Mayawati. The Commission held a press conference on May 20, 2017 and explained in great detail the non-tamperability of EVMs working within the technical and administrative safeguards.

A detailed demonstration of the entire process was given by the EC's technical team. The political parties also interacted with the technical experts of the EC and had a detailed doubt-clearing session. Interestingly, the Uttarakhand High Court in its judgement in June 2017, said "prima facie, it is evident from a combined reading of the entire press release of ECI that this system is seal-proof. The EVMs are not hackable. There cannot be any manipulation at manufacturing stage. The results cannot be altered by activating a Trojan Horse through a sequence of key presses.

"The ECI-EVMs cannot be physically tampered with. The EVMs use some of the most sophisticated technological features like One Time Programmable (OTP) microcontrollers, dynamic coding of key codes, date and time stamping of each and every key press etc. These EVMs also cannot be tampered with during the course of transportation or at the place of storage. There are checks and balances to ensure tamper-proofing of EVMs".

Today, the Indian political parties are divided on the use of EVMs in the coming polls to state legislatures in Rajasthan, Chhattisgarh and Madhya Pradesh states and the parliamentary elections early next year. The Congress party wants a fixed number of Voter Verified Paper Audit Trail to be done to ensure the fidelity of elections.

Till this is done, ballot papers should be used in the elections, according to the stated position of the Congress party. The Voter Verifiable Paper Audit Trail (VVPAT) is a printer-like machine attached to the EVM that enables a voter to check if he has exercised his franchise to the candidate he wanted to. This facility – which is basically a second-check provision of the EVM – was first used five years ago and it is largely a confidence-building measure.

Interestingly, there are opposition parties which do not share the Congress' view about the return to ballot papers even as they would like to see VVPAT audits. The BJP and key regional parties like Biju Janata Dal and All India Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam said they have no problem with either EVMs or paper ballots.

The Election Commission has already stated that all future elections will be mandatorily held with VVPATs in order to ensure utmost transparency and credibility in the EVM-based voting system. The audit trail will only serve to enhance the trust of voters. Most of the parties are demanding the VVPAT facility be expanded to 10 to 30 per cent areas of each constituency so that the electoral process is strengthened.

But there is a view that since India has a total electorate of 800 million, it would be quite a logistical challenge for the EC to arrange VVPAT coverage of 30 per cent of the votes cast. The EC has already carried out random testing of VVPATs of one per cent of votes in some state level polls and it has been suggested if this could be enhanced to the easily achievable target of five per cent.

A ground-breaking partnership to support the Caribbean's ambition to become the world's first 'climate-smart zone' is launched. Eight-times Olympic Gold Medal winner, Usain Bolt attended to help fire the starting pistol for the smart zone will not only protect the region, but also create jobs and a new economy in climate-smart infrastructure.

The Caribbean Accelerator has a vision which builds from the strategies of regional governments and agencies, including CARICOM (Caribbean Community) and OECS the additional $1 billion in funds that it pledged for climate-smart investments across the Caribbean region at the Paris One Planet Summit.

This additional funding will build on an existing portfolio of over $200 million to support innovative solutions focussing on low carbon emissions, sustain-of the implementation of a $300-million project to create the world's first 'climate-smart city' with initial support from the Green Climate Fund (GCF) to help catalyse the project. Closely following a recent GCF investment into Grenada for a $48.7-million climate-smart water project.

An anonymous entrepreneur is investing $2 million to support the Belize government's ocean protection efforts, ocean advocacy across the Caribbean, and entrepreneurs deploying business solutions to benefit the ocean like Algas Organics, which is turning the sargassum nightmare into a business opportunity creating fertiliser to support a thriving agricultural sector in the Caribbean.

The World Bank announced a three-year commitment of $1 million annually in in-kind services for the Accelerator, and is supporting Caribbean countries with an almost $2-billion portfolio focussed on strengthening resilience and financial protection against disasters – including $1 billion in concessional financing from the International Development Association (IDA).

In partnership with the Accelerator, Airbnb (a company based in San Francisco that operates an online marketplace and hospitality service for people to lease or rent short-term lodging) is helping to weave a community of hosts who are ready to respond and build a more resilient Caribbean.

The company is doing this by allowing hosts to open their homes to disaster survivors and relief workers free of charge. Hosts waive their fees and Airbnb waives theirs. To date, over 11,000 people in need have been housed through the Open Homes programme and it's now expanded to the Caribbean.

Usain Bolt announced an annual climate-smart 'Speed Award' identifying the best initiatives across countries, companies, communities and individuals. The first winners will be announced in June 2019. Sean Paul, a Grammy award-winning Jamaican Musician, was announced as an official Ambassador of the Accelerator, with a focus on oceans.

able infrastructure and energy-efficiency projects in the wake of natural disasters, drawing from low-cost blended finance and contingent credit facilities.

The IDB also announced that it will provide $3 million as start-up funds to the Accelerator to help get this important initiative successfully up and running, with the first $1.5 million available this year.

THE value chain approach involves all stakeholders like farmers, traders, processors and consumers, targets loss prevention to agri-produce, value-addition, rural employment and production of quality raw material and processed products.

The value chains are growth catalyst in the Indian agriculture, creating agri-preneurship benefitting all stakeholders. The entrepreneurship plays a crucial role in the development and well being of the society, as it creates jobs, drives innovation and promotes competition which in turn improves productivity as well. In India where it is mainly small holders, it is an effective approach.

The packaging technology for keeping jasmine flowers fresh and fragrant for 72 hours enabled their export to Gulf countries and the US. The innovation enabled flowers harvested in the morning from farmers' fields near Coimbatore to reach retail markets in Gulf countries the next day morning and the US in two days. Every stakeholder including farmers, traders, processors, transporters and exporters involved in the value chain are benefitted by earning more.

Millet known for dietary fibre, minerals and bioactive compounds as health foods lost their sheen in rice/wheat-based food products and changed habits. Several millet-based products from barley, sorghum, foxtail millet, little millets, ragi etc, have been developed through value chains.

The products are millet flakes, cookies, khakra, diabetic mix, multigrain roti, and many others. Revival and revisiting millets importance through value chains made everyone, including policymakers to include millets in the Food Security Act, 2013.

The value chain on linseed has proved highly promising and successful in rainfed areas. The crop losing area has started gaining in acreage. Linseed oil is used to make Omega-3 soft gel (capsules) as food supplement, biscuits, poultry feed and Omega-3 rich eggs.

All these products have made a big change and enhanced demand and price of linseed. Everyone in value chain including farmers, processors, poultry owners, marketers and consumers are getting benefitted through enhanced income and employment, besides health-friendly products.

Co-ordination, intelligence sharing vital among N-E states for security: Rijiju

AAT News Service

THERE is a need of seamless co-ordination and intelligence sharing among the security forces in the North-Eastern states to ensure security of the region, said Kiren Rijiju, Union Minister of State for Home Affairs.

While addressing the delegates at the 25th conference of Director General of Police/Inspector General of Police and Heads of Central Police Organisations (CPOs) of the North-Eastern Region in Itanagar, the minister complimented the forces for successfully handling the complex issues over the years, leading to improved security scenario in the region.

Security issues and policing in North-Eastern states are unique and challenging because the whole region is bordered by neighbouring countries. Due to its geographical situation and exposure to international border, the region has to deal with not only internal, but external issues also, added Mr Rijiju.

The state police of North-Eastern states has played an important role and there is consistent support by Central Police Forces for maintaining law & order situation in the region. Co-ordination, co-operation and flawless intelligence sharing are crucial aspects for security, he said.

Security situation in the North-Eastern states has improved significantly in last four-and-half years and the level of violence and causality figures in the region have come down by more than 50 per cent, said the minister.

The Assam Rifles Academy at Diphu (Karbi Anglong district, Assam) has been identified for specialised training of North-East police in counter-insurgency operations and National Investigation Agency has been conducting training modules for North-East police for investigation of terror-related cases.

The Chief Minister of Arunachal Pradesh, Pema Khandu urged the police chiefs to take steps to ensure regular informal talks among senior police officers of inter-state border districts to deal with the concerns of people of border areas.

tion to processing to packaging. Although the system covers production-to-consumption aspects, priority is accorded to postharvest processing, quality management and packaging issues.

A number of production and processing technologies have been developed and adopted. Sustainability of a value chain depends on the benefits that are being exported regularly to Middle East countries.

Innovation becomes essential to optimise returns from value chain. Innovation in packaging technique has helped in improving the shelf life of jasmine flowers from 24-72 hours, and this has made export of jasmine flowers to the US possible.

Improvement in product development is another aspect,

The value chains can be formed around a wide range of commodities, including food grains and oilseeds, fruits and vegetables, flowers, plantation crops, medicinal and aromatic plants, biofuel crops, natural dyes, agro-forestry, poultry, fisheries, livestock and dairy products. Every stakeholder including farmers, traders, processors, transporters and exporters involved in the value chain are benefitted by earning more stakeholders get and improvements in production process are integral to sustained competitiveness. Several improvements have been made to the existing production processes in rice, millets, guava, jasmine and saffron, which led to increased productivity. For increased income to producers linkages to markets are essential.

This realisation helps producers of jasmine flowers and guava fruits to establish linkages with traders and realise more income, both in national as well as international markets. Jasmine flowers and guava fruits which is important for sustained competitiveness. Innovative value-added products have been developed from millets, fishes and pork, and new entrepreneurs are promoted to establish processing units.

In agro-processing value chains, consortium on millet foods promoted more than 200 processing clusters across the country. Aggressive campaigning among rural masses through choupal haats on value-added foods of sorghum has covered over 12,000 farmers, rural women, entrepreneurs, and self-help groups.

Two rural feed processing units established at Mahabubnagar, Nellore are running successfully. About 50 tonnes of complete feed is being produced by utilising locally-available sorghum straw, maize straw, groundnut haulms and black gram straw. A model sheep slaughter house is established for providing hygienic meat to consumers.

A scientifically-managed pig farm and feed mill unit with a milling capacity of 8 quintals/hour has been developed. Regular disposal of slaughter house waste in aerobic waste disposal pond helps in maintaining the environmental safeguards in the farm premises. Three frozen products consisting of oceanic squid tentacles and two dried oceanic squid products have been developed.

Jasmine flowers produced in Tamil Nadu are exported to Singapore, Malaysia, Sri Lanka, Middle East countries and the US. The export of jasmine is projected at 1,350 and 1,500 kgs/week to Dubai and the US, respectively.

A reliable export-packaging technology has been developed and used to meet the increasing demand for fresh flowers. This technology has resulted in reduction of postharvest losses and increase in flower yield.

Guava farmers were trained on good agricultural practices and proper packaging. They are introduced to exporters from Polachi in Tamil Nadu for exporting guava to Gulf countries. About two consignments (250 kgs each) are sent by air in a week.

Thus, successful and sustainable value chains developed are agro-forestry, flowers, guava and mango, banana, custard apple, ginger, saffron, coconut, protected cultivation, sorghum, bioethanol, millets, linseed, prosopis, natural dyes, biomass, pashmina, meat, milk, dairy products, small pelagic, oysters, and tuna fish.

It is hoped that these value chains will remain sustainable and serve as an inspiration for the development of several more agricultural value chains in the future.

REPORTS of traces of the cancer-causing chemical – formaldehyde, commonly known as formalin, in fish in several states have left its consumers worried and food authorities baffled. Formalin is an aqueous solution of formaldehyde, a known carcinogen, and is traditionally used to treat cadavers in morgues and labs to prevent decomposition.

In the fish trade it is a cost-effective way to keep fish fresh during transportation to faraway each passing day.

Scientists point out three aspects. First, fresh fish should not have preservatives, and the presence of formaldehyde points to unscrupulous vendors trying to pass off the stale catch as recent. Two, the lack of evidence linking ingested formaldehyde with cancer doesn't necessarily make the chemical safe. At high doses, it causes gastric irritation. There is a third complication. When certain marine fish are improperly frozen during transit, Assam, Manipur, Nagaland, Meghalaya – and the temporary ban on fish imports in Goa and North East to soothe public anger is a wake-up call for food safety authorities.

Scientists point out that fish is a highly perishable commodity. Hence it must be stored in ways that spur its shelf life. Since deep freeze, quick freeze and vacuum packing are not cost friendly, unscrupulous sellers are using formalin and ammonia to keep it fresh during inter-state following the seizure of formalin-laced fish.

Manipur recently banned fish, treated with unpermitted additives, imported from other states. In June, the Kerala government found formaldehyde-laced fish being transported into the state. Next, Goa reported similar findings. But its Food and Drugs Administration later said the lev-

CIFT has developed inexpensive rapid detection kits for checking fish adulteration. Experts say India needs to get serious about its food safety laws. The easy access to formalin must be restrained.

Though, formaldehyde is banned as per the Food Safety and Standards Regulations, concerted efforts are imperative to Food that poisons people is a violation of citizens' fundamental right to food. Concerns over formaldehyde contamination of fish need to be addressed scientifically, say experts els in Goan samples were on a par with "naturally occurring" formaldehyde in marine fish. This triggered suspicions among residents, who accused the government of playing down the health risk.

Traces of the deadly chemical have also been detected in sea-fish varieties of mackerel and red snapper being sold in Punjab and Chandigarh. More Sagar Rani-like operations are needed even in the hinterlands like Punjab to check this sordid practice. Raids by food safety inspectors should be swift and sustained while local fish eaters should opt for freshwater fish like rohu and singhara and give a wide berth to sea fishes.

punish willful adulterators who are toying with the lives of people. Both local markets and dominant fish producers like Andhra Pradesh, Kerala and Tamil Nadu have been hit hard by bans and consumers who have turned off fish. Andhra traders, in particular, have bristled at the bans and blame local politics to benefit local producers. Before the scare, Andhra fish producers were the toast of fish eating states, with others seeking to replicate its success in aquaculture.

India is world's second largest fish producer, inland fish produce has doubled since 2004-05, and exports have quadrupled from ₹ 8,400 crore then to ₹ 38,000 crore in 2016-17. The formalin scare highlights the need to keep consumers at the core of business interest, creating cold chain networks for the burgeoning fish trade and ensuring regular food safety inspections.

Additionally, consumers can be helped to safeguard themselves. Kochi-based Central Institute of Fisheries Technology has developed a low-cost kit to detect formalin/ammonia presence in fish which will soon hit the market.

With media reports of indiscriminate antibiotics use in poultry industry and pesticide presence in vegetables, fruits and foodgrains, consumers could do with more such detection kits that offset the state's failure to set up an effective food safety regime. While experts say that food that poisons people is a violation of citizens' fundamental right to food, concerns over formaldehyde contamination of fish need to be addressed – scientifically. FSSAI has banned formaldehyde in fresh fish, while the International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) labelled the chemical a carcinogen in 2004.

markets in place of ice, which requires maintenance.

A derivative of formaldehyde, formalin works like slow poison when ingested. The adverse health risks include damage to cells, kidney and liver problems and cancer. Like most other food items, adulteration is not uncommon in fish.

The matter of concern is that the pan-India malpractice is assuming larger proportions formaldehyde forms in them naturally. But this formaldehyde binds to the tissue, unlike added formaldehyde, which remains free. And so, measuring free formaldehyde versus bound formaldehyde can be one way of distinguishing a contaminant from a naturally occurring chemical.

In such a grim scenario, the discovery of formalin-laced fish across states – Goa, Kerala, transportation. The Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI) and the Central Institute of Fisheries Technology (CIFT) have issued guidelines in this regard, but it is not enough.

Under operation Sagar Rani in Kerala, thousands and thousands of kilograms of adulterated fish were seized recently, triggering panic among fish eaters. In Goa, the Food and Drugs Administration has been alerted

THEY went, they played and were conquered. This is the story of the Indian cricket team's forgettable tour of England.

England won the Test series 4-11, the ODIs 2-1 and lost the T20s 11-2. England won the first Test at Edgbaston by 31 runs, the second at Lord's by an innings and 159 runs, the fourth at Southampton by 60 runs and the fifth at Kennington Oval by 118 runs. India was victorious in the third Test at Trent Bridge, winning it by 203 runs.

In the ODIs, India took a 1-0 lead by winning at Trent Bridge by 8 wickets but lost the next two at Lord's (by 86 runs) and Headingley (by 8 wickets).

India was victorious in the T20 format winning the first (at Old Trafford by 8 wickets) and the third matches (Bristol by 7 wickets), while England won the second match at Cardiff by 5 wickets.

Barring Captain Virat Kohli, the much-hyped Indian batting line-up failed to deliver when it was needed. In the Edgbaston Test, India needed 194 runs to go 1-0 up, but failed. At Southampton, considered the easiest batting track of the series, the target was 245 but Indian batsmen failed to achieve that too.

Ahead of the final Test, Coach Ravi Shastri boasted that even though the team lost the series, it was much better than the squads of the past 15-20 years.

"As hard as our guys tried, England was one upon us there. Nothing to take away (from them), the endeavour of this team is to travel well, compete and win. If you look at the last three years, we have won 9 matches overseas and 3 series (against West Indies and twice in Sri Lanka). I can't see any other Indian team in the last 15-

20 years that has had the same run in such a short time, and you have had some great players playing in those series. So the promise is there, and it's just about getting tougher mentally. You have got to hurt when you lose matches because that's when you look within and come out with the right kind of answers to combat such situations and vicious teams have won matches in the last 15-20 years. I think this was his (Shastri's) view and perhaps only he can speak about it. What I can say is teams in the 80s have won in England and West Indies," Gavaskar told India Today.

"I will not discount wins in Sri Lanka because they are tough to beat at home but when get past the finishing line. One day you will if you believe," Shastri said.

Former Captain Sunil Gavaskar was quick to react, saying "teams in the 80s had won matches in England and West Indies. In Sri Lanka, not too many Indian captains and teams have won. West Indies, England and South Africa, previous teams have won matches in the last 15-20 years. I think this was his (Shastri's) view and perhaps only he can speak about it. What I can say is teams in the 80s have won in England and West Indies," Gavaskar told India Today.

He blamed the smaller version of the game as the reason behind the poor show by the Indian batsmen, especially the openers. "Too much of one-day

India will host a series against the West Indies and then travel to Australia in November. The Australian tour would be the toughest and Indian selectors and management should do all the homework before selecting the best team possible cricket means people can play through the line, but with the kind of movement red ball generates, it is not possible. To play spin bowling, you need to use your feet and the lack of footwork has not helped this team," Gavaskar said.

India hardly got a chance to acclimatise to English conditions. India played just one practice match during the entire tour. The match against Essex which was originally meant to be a four-day match was reduced by a day.

There was also a different in opinion on the practice games between Kohli and Shastri.

Kohli said it was actually a "waste of time" playing weaker opposition in warm-up matches and these served no purpose. Rather than these matches, he felt it was better to play in simulated conditions, as batsmen would face the bowling they want and alter the conditions of the pitch to suit their needs.

Shastri felt it was perfectly okay if there are two or three games against weaker sides because it is a game. "But when you have a schedule as tight as this and when you have a memorandum of understanding that has already been formulated, with a chock-a-block calendar, there is very little you can do. Now, we have requested for a couple of (warm-up) games in Australia before the Test series," he told <ESPNCricinfo.com>.

He, however, stressed on the need to have proper itineraries so that there is time for warm-up matches.

According to Gavaskar, "Kohli should understand that if he doesn't play for a month, he would still come out and score runs. But others need practice. And in practice games you won't get Test quality attacks. But the batsmen and bowlers in match situation add miles to their legs. It's better than taking throw-downs."

Kohli was the star performer scoring 593 runs, with two hundreds and two half centuries. K L Rahul was a distant second with 299 runs, including the 149 in the dead rubber. Cheteshwar Pujara scored 278 runs. The pacers also performed brilliantly bagging 61 wickets, with Ishant Sharma (18), Jasprit Bumrah (16) and Mohammed Shami (14) leading the way.

In Sanjay Manjrekar's words on <ESPNCricinfo.com>, "India has missed one of their greatest opportunities to win an overseas series. England is not a strong side, even at home. A number of their batsmen average in the 30s at first-class level. On pure current form, their team has two world-class bowlers in James Anderson and Stuart Broad and not much else. India should have done a lot better. So what is ailing India's batting? It's obviously about adapting, as Indians bat pretty well at home.

"If India really care about winning overseas, they must not care about winning at home as much. Because if you are desperate to win at home, you pick players ideal for home conditions, like Dhawan, who will then let you down on the next overseas tour. Instead, pick a batsman who might not be as effective as Dhawan in home conditions but will be better overseas. This goes for all players – batsmen and bowlers".

"India's selectors must pick batsmen in home series who have the potential to get runs overseas. Such batsmen will get an adequate amount of runs in home series anyway, being home-grown talent, but their better techniques and discipline give you hope that they will do well overseas," he suggests.

India will host a series against the West Indies and then travel to Australia in November. The Australian tour would be the toughest and Indian selectors and management should do all the homework before selecting the best team possible.
